

I wish to plead with the FCC to reconsider any efforts to change the programming and/or functioning abilities of my beloved K-love station. K-love is a valuable asset to my family and myself. My husband and I discovered K-love 6 months ago and since have nearly abandoned all other sources of radio. K-love supplies an uplifting, positive message for us and serves as a platform to further our relationships with God. We have three children who also enjoy K-love and through the station have developed a love for Christian music. They have loaded their iPods with contemporary Christian songs like Casting Crowns, Brit Nicole and countless others. We also love that K-love functions solely on the money we, the listeners, supply and not on those of endless, annoying commercials.

It would be an injustice to force every radio station to take programming advice from community advisory boards. This means that my local K-love station could be forced to take programming advice from people whose values are at odds with the Gospel! A well-organized group of atheists, abortionists or secular humanists could demand representation – and have standing to cause trouble at the FCC if they were turned away. I implore you to not allow people who are against our beliefs to impose themselves on our stations. We are not in any way imposing our beliefs on them.

Also your proposal to drive up the costs of providing Christian Broadcasting services by eliminating labor-saving technological enhancements that make it possible to operate radio stations, at least part of the time, without an employee on the premises seems unfair. Our k-love station does not require anything from the FCC monetarily, therefore why not leave well enough alone.

I will admit that many of these changes make absolutely no sense to me whatsoever, however, I understand enough to know that these are unnecessary changes to a station that serves the will of God. We enjoy K-love just as it is and support it with our monthly pledge. Please have a heart and allow those of us who enjoy uninterrupted, God centered, and uplifting radio to have it just as it is with no further sanctions by the FCC. Thank you for taking time to hear my views.

Sincerely,

Bryan and Jennifer Jarrell
